My work in the editing business started in 2008 with the well-known program Sony Vegas, since then I have been learning and progressing in audio visual.

In 2009 I started photographing and advising political candidates and in 2010 I joined the Faculty of Journalism where I developed projects, worked harder on learning photography and media.

In 2013 I was invited to participate in the Amazon Film Festival, where I observed how the festival and cinema behave.

In 2013 I made my first documentary in a community called Caranã where a typical fruit from this region, the bacaba, took place.

In 2014 I competed with a video in a contest where I won first place, winning an iphone, ipad and ipod. Then I applied for a program called sala de cinema that edited and helped in the production, this being a college project. I competed with Sala de Cinema in the vignette category, taking first place.

In 2015 I competed with a documentary about breast cancer and I won at the regional level for best documentary, and until now I have done photography and video filming work...
